PUNS WIN IN NINTH
INNING TALKFEST

In a clean, fast game, marred by no at-bat work, but well spiced up with howls at the work of the umpire, the Santa Clara nine yesterday demonstrated their superiority over the best which the Territory of Hawaii can furnish in the way of a baseball team. The score was 5 to 0.

Some wild pitching by Reuter, interspersed through some really good work, a few more walks than should have been, and a timely bingle, tell the tale. Kilburn outpitched Reuter. With fewer strikeouts to his credit, he did not issue a complimentary, while Dick was lavish with the transfers. Otherwise he did well, as few hits were made on either side, and Richard struck out an enormous number of men.

Eddie Fernandez looked like a star of the first magnitude through the game, but in the first inning he assumed for a time the proportions of a comet with a tail and brush whiskers. Hush Lappin smashed the sphere on the scout, and "Well done," yelled the Clarans, only to sit down quietly as Eddie took a flying jump, and reached the ball down in his mit as nicely as you please. It was a great stop.

In the second, the locals looked good, as Bill Vannatta hammered the horsehide for a double, but could not get past third.

In this same inning, it happened for the visitors. Kennedy singled and Byrnes, running for him, stole second and third, and came home on a wild pitch.

Up to the fifth, neither side could do much, but then the terrible happened. Broderick walked and annexed second and third on passed balls. Joy did not seem able to stop anything which Reuter unwound, and Dick was certainly a little wild. Kilburn walked and stole, and "Cheese" scored on another passed ball. But Kilburn and then Lappin were nailed at the plate.

It was in the sixth that things went the worst. At the last of the fifth Joy split a finger, and was replaced by Burns behind the bat. From that time on the battery worked well, and it is probable that if the change had been made sooner the game would at least have been much closer. But the rush of events was entirely out of Burns' hands. Peters walked and Byrnes was hit by a pitched ball. Friene sacrificed. Kennedy bunted, and Reuter had the ball quickly, but was up against it to know what to do with it. Byrnes had hiked for third, but found Peters on the sack there and was hiking back to the place whence he came.

Reuter slapped the ball to second, and Peters dug for the plate. A wild throw by Burns, and Pete was safe a mile. Then Cheese Broderick finished the fell work by singling to right field, and allowing Byrnes and Kennedy to beat it home. This made the score 5 to 0.

In the eighth, the locals pulled off a nice double. The seventh and ninth innings were characterized by a little coarse work on the part of the umpire. In the seventh, Jim Williams grounded to Broderick and was cut, but the umpire called foul ball, and Jim had another chance. He dodged the ball and it struck his bat. Seeing that the umpire thought he was hit, he swung his hand furiously as if in pain, and was told to take his base. In the ninth, En Sue was plainly safe at second on Fernandez' bunt, but was called out amid howls from the crowd. This probably prevented the locals from making good their one chance to score.

The first series of the Honolulu Baseball League's regular schedule is not pau. The Saints failed to hold the Puns Saturday in a rather sleepy game played with a small crowd present, and concluded with a score of 4 to 1 in the ninth with nobody to see the finish. The reason was that the spectators got tired during a ten minutes' talkfest which was instituted over a decision of the umpire, and hiked for the car, leaving the contestants to their own devices.

Friene and Salberg of Santa Clara were chosen to do the umpire stunt, but now they say "never again." The Punaheles had the game won when, in the ninth, Plada struck at the ball with Aylett on first. The third strike was a passed ball, and Friene called Plada safe at first. After ten minutes or more of talking, during which the Punaheles left the field, Plada was called out, and serenely restored.

The Saints came up first, En Sue dying Hampton to Gleason, but John Williams starting the ball rolling when he gave Beggs a swift proposition to negotiate, and reached first while the second baseman was playing with it. He stole second and took third while Marcellino was chasing a passed ball. Bruns flew to Lyman, when Joy went out on a neat throw from Burns to first, and the Saints failed to score.

En Sue dropped Lyman's grounder, but grabbed up Burns' and pinned Lyman at second, Burns being safe on a fielder's choice. Ham dropped an easy one over the infield, but Kia fanned and H. Bruns was out on a bunt.

Deef Aylett started it in the second by placing a bingle over second. Barney Joy (think of it!) was put on to run for him. Plada grounded and everyone was safe on his error. Then Pat Gleason flew to Lyman, but Soares followed with a sacrifice, but chances were again spotted when "Sleepy" Dan Arcia flew to Beggs.

The scoring started in the last of the second.

Castle was safe on Joy's bad bungle, and Marcellino sacrificed, and Castle scored a moment later on Henderson's two-bagger after Beggs had fanned. Lyman ended it short to first. Score: Puns 1, Saints 0.

Hoogs was at this stage of the game put in Beggs' place at second. En Sue died second to first, and Williams third to first, followed by Bruns, down on the same play.

Burns went down second to first. Ham got his on a nice throw from En Sue, and Kia flew to "Deef" Aylett.

Barney Joy got a complimentary, but was grabbed when he lumbered along in an attempt to purloin second. Aylett died, second to first, but Plada made second on short's error. Pat closed it, second to Marcellino.

The Puns toppled down one, two three. Coming up at the beginning of the fifth, the Saints looked good. Soares dropped one over second, but was grabbed up and snapped down at second, while "Deep-Sleep" Dan Arcia fanned the zephyrs. En Sue got a transfer, and stole in time to see Jim Williams die at the initial bag.

In the last of the fifth, the Puns narrowly missed scoring, after Lyman had reached third on a combination of fielder's choice, steal, and sacrifice hit—Kia-Fernandez.

passed ball. Hampton grounded to En Sue and was just too late in a valiant dive for first, being the third man down.

Opening the sixth, G. Bruns annexed first on Henderson's error, but died at second, while Barney Poi was safe on a fielder's choice. Beef Aylett flew to Hoogs, and Plada ended the spasm by smashing one to Henderson, who pinned Barney on second.

Kia fanned, but H. Bruns took two sacks on an overthrow from En Sue; Castle hit, and Marcellino sacrificed. Hoogs flew to Aylett, and there was another goose-egg on the score board.

At the first of the seventh, Pat Gleason smashed a speedy one, but Burns nailed it, and then Soares died Ham to Antonio, while Dan of the snoozes again beat the air.

Then it happened.
Henderson was robbed of a hit by Jim Williams' fast work. After Lyman drew his walking permit, Barney dropped Burns' bunt and both romped home as Hampton pasted the pellet far out to left, annexing three backs. Kia sacrificed and Ham slid home. Harry Bruns took second on Aylett's error, but Castle flew to G. Bruns and the swift slide down the chute was stopped.

En Sue flew to H. Bruns in the eighth, Jim Williams was out, En Sue to one Antonio G. Marcellino. However, G. Bruns hit over second, only to die at that sack on Joy's grounder to Henderson.

Marcellino flew to Arcia. Hoogs was out, third to first, and Henderson died at the initial bag.

Aylett hit to center at the beginning of the ninth. Plada struck out on a passed ball, but Umpire Friene failed to call him out, and a terrible racket ensued. Friene finally called him out, and the band played "Star-Spangled Banner." But Berger had the wrong cue, and the game was finally resumed. En Sue was put on to run for Aylett. Pat got a hit, because Henderson held the ball. Soares flew to center and En Sue came in on the sacrifice. Arcia fanned.
